Degree structure

In each year of your degree you will take a number of individual modules, normally valued at 0.5 or 1.0 credits, adding up to a total of 4.0 credits for the year. Modules are assessed in the academic year in which they are taken. The balance of compulsory and optional modules varies from programme to programme and year to year. A 1.0 credit is considered equivalent to 15 credits in the European Credit Transfer System (ECTS).

The first year includes several introductory lecture courses, which provide a foundation for later studies. The programme covers political philosophy, examining questions about the state, liberty and laws; moral philosophy, questioning distinctions of right and wrong, and our motivation for choosing between the two; epistemology which investigates the nature of knowledge and belief; metaphysics, which attempts to grasp the nature of things; and logic, which imparts principles of sound reasoning.

You will study Philosophy and Greek on an equal basis. Optional modules in Latin are also offered.

YEAR ONE

Core or compulsory module(s)

- All first year modules are optional.

Optional modules

- You will select 4.0 credits of optional modules, including: 2.0 credits of Greek & Latin modules
- Four Philosophy modules from the following:
  - Introduction to the History of Philosophy I
  - Introduction to the History of Philosophy II
  - Introduction to Logic I
  - Introduction to Logic II
  - Introduction to Moral Philosophy
  - Introduction to Political Philosophy
  - Knowledge and Reality
  - Philosophical Study Skills: Reading, Understanding, and Essay Writing

YEAR TWO

Core or compulsory module(s)

- All second year modules are optional.

Optional modules

- You will select 4.0 credits of optional modules, including:
  - 2.0 credits of Greek & Latin modules
  - Four optional modules from Philosophy, including modules from at least two of the groups A, B, and C:
    - Group A: Theoretical Philosophy (e.g. Knowledge; Metaphysics; Mind and Body; Language)
    - Group B: Normative Philosophy (e.g. Aesthetics; Applied Ethics; Global Justice and Health; Morality and Literature; Normative Ethics; Political Philosophy)
    - Group C: History of Philosophy (Aristotle; Plato; Marx; Nietzsche; Wittgenstein; Sartre)

FINAL YEAR

Core or compulsory module(s)

- All third year modules are optional.

Optional modules

- You will select 4.0 credits of optional modules, including:
  - 2.0 credits of Greek & Latin modules
  - 2.0 credits from the wide range of Philosophy modules available.
Your learning

Our teaching is based on lectures and seminars that complement each other. In your first year, you will be introduced to the basic elements of philosophical reasoning through lectures, seminars and small-group tutorial classes. In years two and three your chosen modules will be taught by an expert from within our department through a combination of lectures, related seminars and classes.

Assessment
Assessment is by a mixture of coursework (essays) and written examination. You may also elect to submit a dissertation as one of your Philosophy optional modules.

Your career

This programme will assist you in constructing and assessing philosophical positions and arguments, thereby teaching you how to analyse and present complex ideas. Furthermore, it will provide you with an understanding of a wide range of traditional and contemporary philosophical theories. Such skills are transferable to non-philosophical contexts.

The discipline of philosophical training, and in particular its emphasis on rigorous argumentation, logic, and clarity of thought and expression, makes philosophy graduates highly suitable for a wide variety of careers.

First career destinations of recent graduates (2013-2015) of this programme include:

// Graduate Trainee, KPMG
// Full-time student, MSt in Philosophy at the University of Oxford
// Future Leader, Barclays
// Full-time student, BPhil in Philosophy at the University of Oxford
// Journalist, Banbury Guardian (2011)

Your application

Application for admission should be made through UCAS (the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service). Applicants currently at school or college will be provided with advice on the process; however, applicants who have left school or who are based outside the United Kingdom may obtain information directly from UCAS.

In addition to looking for outstanding grades in your academic record, we also assess your application for evidence of your ability to engage with philosophical arguments, your skills in reasoning, and your facility with languages and linguistics.

Selection will be made on the basis of information contained in the UCAS application: achieved and predicted academic grades, the level of interest in, motivation towards, and experience of the subject as indicated in the personal statement, the reference supplied, and any relevant contextual factors.
