Psychology with Education BSc

Accredited by the British Psychological Society, this programme enables you to test out psychological theories in real-life settings, including education, and to appreciate an interdisciplinary perspective. You will be taught by people engaged in cutting-edge research in child and adolescent development, education, atypical development (e.g. autism, dyslexia), learning, neuroscience and sociology.

Key information

Programme starts
September 2019

Location
London, Bloomsbury

Degree benefits

- An exciting three-year interdisciplinary programme which covers cognitive, social, developmental, clinical, perceptual, and biological aspects of psychology, as well as an exploration of their application in education. You will be taught by internationally recognised experts in teaching and research.

- The UCL Institute of Education (IOE), has been ranked first for education worldwide for the last five years (QS World University Rankings by Subject) and was awarded the Queen's Anniversary Prize for Higher and Further Education 2015.

- The degree offers you the opportunity to study psychology even if you do not have a background in science and equips you with the knowledge and skills for a wide range of professions such as educational or clinical psychology, counselling, research, teaching, healthcare, marketing and human resources.

- We run interactive sessions and use a variety of assessment methods including essays, exams, presentations and portfolios to allow students of diverse abilities and backgrounds to demonstrate their knowledge and build on their reflection and critical thinking skills.

Accreditation

This programme is accredited by The British Psychological Society. UK applicants for graduate membership and the Graduate Basis for Chartered Membership (GBC) require a minimum of a lower second-class Bachelor's degree and need to have passed their final-year research project. Graduate Basis for Chartered Membership is required for entry to all accredited postgraduate and doctoral programmes as part of the route to becoming a Chartered Psychologist.

Degree structure

In each year of your degree you will take a number of individual modules, normally valued at 15 or 30 credits, adding up to a total of 120 credits for the year. Modules are assessed in the academic year in which they are taken. The balance of compulsory and optional modules varies from programme to programme and year to year. A 30-credit module is considered equivalent to 15 credits in the European Credit Transfer System (ECTS).

In the first year you will take four compulsory modules worth 90 credits and you will choose 90 credits of optional modules which will give you a good grounding in both psychology and education. You will start to develop your knowledge and understanding of theoretical approaches used in psychology and education, and the empirical research informing these, developing an awareness of the strengths and limitations of different methods.

In year two you will study five core modules (90 credits) as required for British Psychological Society (BPS) accreditation, which include key topics in developmental, cognitive, individual, social and biological psychology, and a critical evaluation of competing theoretical approaches. You will also have a choice of 30 credits of optional modules.

In the final year you will take two core modules (60 credits) including a research project, and can choose 60 credits) from a variety of advanced optional modules, depending on your areas of interest. On completion of the degree you will have an understanding of data analysis, be able to conduct statistical analysis using Statistical Package for the Social Sciences (SPSS) and will have developed a range of general skills in problem-solving and effective communication.

Throughout your studies you will receive support to complete your academic work but also to explore opportunities (volunteering or paid) which will enhance your CV.

Your learning

Teaching will be delivered through lectures, small-group work, practical experience in laboratory classes, and your own field research. Additional education studies modules in years one and two will allow you to develop an understanding of the links between the disciplines of psychology and education.

Assessment

Assessment is through coursework essays, practical laboratory reports, final year project, essay-based work, portfolios, presentations and examinations.

Your career

You will acquire quantitative and qualitative skills based on the scientific methods of psychology and its application to education by critically evaluating research data and conducting your own research studies. You will have also developed a range of highly transferable skills including problem-solving, communication, essay-writing and critical thinking.

This degree provides the Graduate Basis for Chartered Membership of the British Psychological Society (BPS), an entry requirement for many BPS-accredited postgraduate courses (e.g. educational or clinical psychology). Alternatively, you may wish to pursue a career in research, healthcare, teaching or other education settings; or even in business, management, marketing and human resources.

Our graduates have followed a variety of routes such as Master's degrees in areas such as psychology of education, health psychology, child and adolescent mental health, innovation, entrepreneurship and management. Teaching degrees, for example PGCE in primary education. Work in clinical and educational settings, organisational and occupational psychology posts.
