ARCHAEOLOGY MA / 2019/20 ENTRY

www.ucl.ac.uk/graduate/
The Archaeology MA is an intensive induction programme on current archaeological theory and interpretive trends which equips students to undertake research in their chosen field. The flexible programme of study serves as an excellent expansion of undergraduate studies or as a self-designed foundation for further postgraduate and professional work.

Degree summary

The programme provides a wide-ranging introduction to archaeology as a comparative, anthropologically-informed, and socially situated discipline. Students develop critically aware perspectives on archaeological practice and research processes and gain an in-depth understanding of approaches to the collection, analysis and interpretation of archaeological data. The programme is extremely flexible, with a wide choice of options available allowing students to tailor the programme to their own interests.

- The UCL Institute of Archaeology is the largest and one of the most highly regarded centres for archaeology, archaeological science, cultural heritage and museum studies in Britain, highlighted by its leading position in university assessments and National Student Survey results. It is one of the very few departments in the world undertaking research on a truly global scale. Its degrees offer an unrivalled variety of modules. The institute hosts events on many different aspects of archaeology and is linked to heritage organisations, museums and archaeological societies, providing an outstanding research environment for students.

- It is truly international in outlook and membership, with students and staff from over 40 countries, and involvement in field research projects around the world.

- UCL is located in central London, within walking distance of the British Museum and the British Library. UCL’s own museums and collections constitute a resource of international importance for research.

The core modules are seminar based, and the sessions are interactive, with an emphasis on student participation and critical discussion. The optional modules are delivered through seminars, lectures, practicals, laboratory sessions, tutorials, and site and museum visits, as appropriate for specific modules. Assessment is through essays, oral examination and the dissertation.

Degree structure

Mode: Full-time: 1 year; Part-time: 2 years

Location: London, Bloomsbury

Taught courses take place in the first two terms. The remainder of the year is devoted to the dissertation.

Students undertake modules to the value of 180 credits. The programme consists of two core modules (30 credits), optional modules (60 credits) and a research dissertation (90 credits).

Please note that the list of modules given here is indicative. This information is published a long time in advance of enrolment and module content and availability is subject to change.

COMPULSORY MODULES

- All students are required to take the following:
  - Themes, Thought and Theory in World Archaeology: Foundations
  - Themes, Thought and Theory in World Archaeology: Current Issues

OPTIONAL MODULES

- Students choose to follow further optional modules up to the value of 60 credits from an outstanding range of Master’s programme options available at the UCL Institute of Archaeology. Some of the most popular choices include:
  - Aegean Prehistory: major themes and current debates
  - African Heritage
  - Archaeologies of Modern Conflict
  - Archaeology of Buddhism
  - Archaeology and Education
  - Archaeology of Hunter-Gatherers from the Emergence of Modern Humans
  - Aztec Archaeology: Codices and Ethnohistory
  - British and European Prehistory: Neolithic to Iron Age
  - Comparative Archaeologies of the Americas I: First Peoples to Emerging Complexity
  - Funerary Archaeology
  - Heritage Ethics and Archaeological Practice in the Middle East and Mediterranean
  - Interpreting Pottery
  - Maya Art, Architecture and Archaeology
  - Medieval Archaeology: Select Topics and Current Problems

Please note not all modules are available every year.

DISSERTATION/REPORT

- All MA students undertake an independent research project which culminates in a dissertation of approximately 15,000 words (90 credits).
Your career

Some recent graduates of the programme have gone on to PhD studies while others have pursued an incredibly wide range of professional careers both within and beyond archaeology.

Employability

As the most general of the MA/MSc programmes, the experience and skills acquired depends on the optional modules selected, and how those skills are developed through assessed work, developing expertise in the archaeology of specific regions, periods or themes, or specific field, museum and analytical skills. All students acquire a detailed understanding of specific theoretical debates and the critical skills to evaluate existing arguments and interpretations and to develop their own research, develop a range of research skills, and design and carry through original research.
Entry requirements

A minimum of an upper second-class Bachelor's degree in a relevant subject from a UK university or an overseas qualification of an equivalent standard.

English language proficiency level

If your education has not been conducted in the English language, you will be expected to demonstrate evidence of an adequate level of English proficiency.

The level of English language proficiency for this programme is: Good. Information about the evidence required, acceptable qualifications and test providers is provided at: www.ucl.ac.uk/graduate/english-requirements

Your application

Students are advised to apply as early as possible due to competition for places. Those applying for scholarship funding (particularly overseas applicants) should take note of application deadlines.

When we assess your application we would like to learn:

- why you want to study Archaeology at graduate level
- why you want to study Archaeology at UCL
- what particularly attracts you to this programme
- how your personal, academic and professional background meets the demands of a challenging academic environment
- where you would like to go professionally with your degree

Together with essential academic requirements, the personal statement is your opportunity to illustrate whether your reasons for applying to this programme match what the programme will deliver.

There is an application processing fee for this programme of £75 for online applications and £100 for paper applications. Further information can be found at: www.ucl.ac.uk/prospective-students/graduate/taught/application.
