Developmental and Educational Psychology MSc

This programme offers a comprehensive research training in developmental and educational psychology. It is recognised by the Economic and Social Research Council and can lead to further study at doctoral level.

Degree summary

Students will develop in-depth knowledge of specialised research skills, and be able to use a broad range of methods to critically appraise and conduct rigorous research in the field. Students learn how to assess the contribution of psychology to policy goals and how to evaluate education policies.

- UCL Institute of Education (IOE) is one of the world's leading centres for education and related areas of social science, and students learn from leading researchers in the field.
- For the fifth year in succession the IOE has been ranked number one for education (QS World University Rankings by Subject 2018).
- Our alumni include government ministers; heads of schools, other educational institutions and NGOs; Olympians; and prize-winning authors.

This programme is delivered through a combination of lectures by UCL Institute of Education academic staff and guest speakers, group work, discussion, and computer workshops giving hands-on practice. Assessment is through coursework examination. Coursework involves small exercises conducted throughout the module, critiques of set research articles and extended pieces of writing on set topics and the dissertation.

Degree structure
